Fifty years ago Sunfield was a (small)big/tiny town. There were about thirteen/thirty shops, a post-office/a bank/a hospital/a school/a cinema/a garage/a railway station and a church. About 5,000/500/15,000 people lived here in houses/flats on the two main roads. There were factories/fields/farms all round the town.

Twenty years ago they built the radio/camera factory to the west/east of the town, then the new flats to the north. They closed the church/railway. Then they built more houses/hotels in the fields to the south/north. They needed bigger roads so they built roads all round the town. They closed the cinema/bank/school and made it into a hospital/supermarket.

Ten years ago they built there a computer factory and more farms/offices/flats/parks and shops.

Now there are about 15,000/1,500/150,000 people living in Sunfield.

Hi All,

Alberobello is a wonderful little town in the south of Italy. They have a very unusual style of houses. The houses were built hundreds of years ago! To me the place looked as if gnomes lived there. The roofs of the houses are made of flat stones and have an interesting shape. The houses are cool in summer (the climate is very hot) and warm in winter. Some of them are used as hotels. When we began to walk along the main street we saw many tourist shops. I enjoyed looking around them.

If you ever find yourself in Italy, stopping in this lovely place is a must!

Hello everyone,

Here are some notes of the places we loved on our journey in Russia.

We were driving down to Moscow from St. Petersburg, and along the way we saw some beautiful wooden houses. These are traditional old Russian houses in the countryside.

The windows are often decorated with carved wooden designs, and they remind me of Hansel and Gretel fairytale cottages. Unfortunately, many of these little houses are very old, and nobody lives in them.

I wish we could find a small hotel in one of these houses when we come to Russia again.

Flag of Alaska

The state flag of Alaska was designed by 13 year-old Bennie Benson from Chignik, Alaska in 1926. In 1926 there was a flag-designing competition for Alaska schoolchildren. Bennie's design was chosen from 142 designs. Benny drew three flags. One had a dog sled and two dogs on a bright green field. Another one showed a large mountain and the yellow sun. The third one had stars on a blue field. This one became the winner.

It became the official flag in 1959 when Alaska became the 49th state of the USA. The blue colour means the blue sky and the forget-me-not, an Alaskan flower. The flag also has the North Star because Alaska is the north of America. Bennie's prize was 1000 dollars and a watch with the picture of his flag on it. In 1963 Bennie gave this watch to the Alaska State Museum and it is still there.
